TROOPERS GET HUGE STILL AND OUTFIT

Three Men Under Arrest, Including the "Big Boss"

ALL NOW UNDER BAIL

One of the largest stills ever taken in Bucks County was gotten in a raid by State Troopers from Doylestown when it was located in an old creamery building in Bedminster township, on a property that only a few days ago was levied on by the Sheriff.

Troopers William Keuch and Peter Reilly made the raid and took 6,000 gallons of rye mash, in three 2,000-gallon vats, all "working"; 52 bags of brown cane sugar, three one-pound cartons of yeast, 60 empty five-gallon cans, 15 pounds of carbonate ammonia, 330 feet of two-inch hose, steam water pumps connected with the still, a steam boiler, ten feet high and a 350-pound gauge, 60 pounds of coke, pipe fittings, a 60-gallon cooling tank on the first floor, a 120-gallon cooling tank on the second floor and a 500-gallon galvanized cooling tank nearby, a copper still with a capacity of at least 1500 gallons which stood 24 feet high and two and one-half feet across, reaching from the first floor up through the building to the third floor. Thousands of gallons of rye moonshine would have been in the course of manufacture within the next 10 hours had not the troopers arrived.

Aaron Uman, 24, and William Frankel, 26, 639 S. Park street, Elizabeth, N. J., were arrested. Mrs. Bertha Poddig, 35, who with her husband had for some time been living in the house on the place, was taken as a witness and released in her own recognizance. On their return to the farm the troopers with Mrs. Poddig caught Michael Braunfield, 29, 5121 Pennway avenue, Philadelphia, who is alleged to be the big "boss" of the outfit and the one identified by Mrs. Poddig as having rented the place.

IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Maurice Hubbs, Jackson street, is in the Woman's Medical Hospital, Philadelphia, undergoing treatment.

FIVE ONE-ROOM SCHOOLS SOLD IN UPPER BUCKS

Some Purchased at Public Auction to Be Used for Dwellings

TWO WERE NOT SOLD

SELLERSVILLE, July 16—As the auctioneer's gavel sounded five one-room school houses of the upper Penn passed into history. Two others among the seven offered at public sale by West Rockhill School District were withdrawn when bidding failed to reach the mark set by the directors. They will be sold as soon as a higher bid is made.

The schools substantial in structure and well-kept, were vacated early this year. Most of the purchasers intend to make dwellings of the buildings and to remodel them as soon as possible.

George Grauer, Dietz's Mill, who purchased the Rockwild school, located two and one-half miles north of this borough on the Bethlehem Pike, expects to remodel the building for a residence. The price was $850.

This school is an old landmark on the highway and in lieu of a church was the meeting house of the Union Sunday School for about seventy years.

About thirty-five years ago Messrs. Longacre and Reiter reorganized the class as "Rockwild Sunday School Class" and it has been open from Sunday to Sunday to the present time. The class must vacate the building in September.

Charles Guent, Ridge Valley, who bought the school located near his saw mill in that place, says he expects to make alterations to the building and perhaps use it for a home. His bid was $500. His present residence is just across the street from the building.

The Almont school was purchased for $700 by Mrs. Amelia Kut, Sellersville, R. D. She lives on the former Fargo farm.

Peter G. Moyer, South Perkasie, was the highest bidder for the Bean school located on the Sellersville-Telford state road. His bid was $850. He formerly owned the farm on which the building is located.

The lowest price was obtained for the Argus school, purchased by William A. Kopp, Sr., of near Sellersville, for $410.

The Branch Valley and Benner buildings were withdrawn because bids did not come up to the level of their estimated value. The former is located in the Branch Valley section, two miles west of Sellersville, while Benner's is near Naveville.

Men started leveling the soil in front of the new West Rockhill consolidated school on Wednesday, preparatory to sowing grass seed. Trees will be planted later and a cement sidewalk will be laid in the near future.

DISLIKED UPSETTING HOME FOR A FUNERAL

West Rockhill Man Buried From Mortuary; Wills Goods to Sister

SETTLE MANY ESTATES

Because he disliked "upsetting a home for a funeral," the funeral services of William J. Doyle, of West Rockhill, were held in a Perkusie Mortuary, it was learned today after his will was filed in the Register of Wills' office at Doylestown.

The will, which was written in long-hand on a sheet torn from a ledger book, stated that a sister, Mrs. Anna Lorine, of Phila., should inherit his personal estate amounting to $600. Doyle passed away in December.

The $11,000 estate of Alfred Gehrlinger, of Quakertown, who died on July 3, will be divided among three children with certain reservations. Those who will share equal parts include his two daughters, Kate Gehrlinger, of Philadelphia, and Amanda Laubach, wife of Jacob M. Laubach, of Quakertown, and a son, George J. Gehrlinger, of Quakertown, all of whom will inherit their portions after the estate has been converted into cash, it was stated.

The sum of $200 was given to each of the children of the testator's oldest son, it was explained. According to the document, Mr. Gehrlinger did not know the names of these two grandchildren, whose father is deceased.

Another Quakertown resident, Annie P. Croman, who died on June 13, bequeathed her estate to her two sons and grandchildren. The estate valued at $500 consisted mostly of personal possessions.

To a granddaughter, Emma Croman, and a grandson, Charles, Mrs. Croman gave the sum of $50.

A third grandchild was given a gold watch. Milton Croman and his brother, Henry, who were named the executors, were given various clocks and articles of furniture.

Mrs. Croman, in memory of her husband, created a trust fund, the interest of which shall be used to keep their graves in perpetual care in the Richlandtown Cemetery to whom the bequest was made.

Mrs. Olive G. Bartholomew and her son, Franklin, were named heirs of the estate of the late Miles F. Bartholomew, of Quakertown, who died on July 5. It amounted to $700.

Seven sons and two daughters will inherit the estate of their father, Samuel G. Bealer, of Springfield, who died June 21, according to the letters of administration granted to Frank Bealer, amounting to $750.

In the estate of Albert Wunsch, of Middletown, Hilda Wunsch was granted the letters of administration.

Elizabeth Penn was granted the letters of administration in the estate of Sophie Doyle, of West Rockhill, $1000. Letters of administration amounting to $800 were granted to Russell E. Scholl in the estate of Hattie Sterner, of Quakertown.

Inventories were filed in the estate of Franey C. Fryling, of Haycock, $787.23, and in the estate of Andrew C. Blehn, of Quakertown, $19,500.

NEW HARRIMAN IX. LOSES

Hirth sparkled on the defense, while Ford's circuit clout also pleased the large crowd.

SUITS TOTALING $85,000 ARE FILED AGAINST DAIRY CO.

Charge Alleged Careless and Negligent Operation of Keystone Truck

TWO DIED, ONE HURT

George Scott and John C. Mayer Killed; Vincent Myers Injured

Suits have been filed against the Keystone Dairy Company, here, for a total of $85,000 damages as the result of an automobile accident occurring at Croydon, May 7th. Two men died as the result of the crash and a boy was injured. The accident occurred at the intersection of State Road and Cedar avenue.

The suits have been filed in the Prothonotary's office, Doylestown, and the charges are alleged careless and negligent operation of one of the trucks of the Keystone Company, a milk distributing firm.

According to the first suit Mrs. Eva J. Mayer, Croydon, alleges her husband, John C. Mayer, died the next day as the result of injuries received when a truck ran up on the sidewalk where he was standing and crushed him against his own theatre.

The plaintiff alleges the driver of the truck was operating it in a careless manner.

In connection with the filing of a suit by Mrs. Mayer, Vincent Myers, a minor and Anna Snyder, Croydon, in a suit claiming damage amounting to $35,000 allege that when the truck driven by an employee of the Keystone Dairy Company injured Mayer it also struck the 11-year old youth, Vincent, fracturing his arm, and rendering him sore, lame and disordered.

The youth is the son of John Myers and Anna Myers Snyder. Mrs. Snyder, his mother, who was divorced from Myers, is at present the wife of Frank Snyder.

The boy, the suit avers, was standing at State Road and Cedar avenue, Croydon, when the truck left the highway and careened up on the sidewalk. He claims $25,000 in his own behalf, and his mother seeks to recover $10,000.

George Scott was the other man killed in the accident. He was standing beside Mayer when the truck struck both men, and knocked a weighing machine down on Myers, the lad who was injured.

Shoulder Injuries Are Suffered in Accident

Frank Capici, 411 Lafayette street, suffered injuries to his shoulders last evening at about five o'clock when the automobile of Richard McCue, 620 Pine street, in which he was riding, and that operated by Bartolo Napoli, 422 Jefferson avenue, collided.

The accident in which Capici was the only one hurt, occurred at the corner of Lafayette street and the highway while the traffic light read "Caution" it is stated. McCue was driving out Lafayette street, while the Napoli machine was on the highway. Capici was treated at Harriman Hospital.

FRIENDLY COMMENT

Here are reproduced editorials from "The Western Daily Press and Bristol Mirror and Bristol Observer," in Bristol, England:

Bristol, Pa.
One day last week reference was made to an American newspaper, the "Bristol Pa. Courier," which reached this office with a conspicuous announcement concerning the enterprise of our Development Board and the film which is now being exhibited in the United States of America. Another copy of the "Courier" has arrived, and the outstanding news feature concerns the opening of the deep water channel in the Delaware, which will enable ocean-going vessels to navigate the river. Bristol, Pennsylvania, is naturally interested because the town is set on the banks of this great river, and according to the "Courier" the townsfolk are looking forward eagerly to the passing of the first ocean-going steamer, due to take place at the end of the present month. This event has much interest for us here in the parent city, too, because that first ship to use the deep-water channel is the Bristol City, which is now on her way with a cargo of china clay from Cornwall to Trenton, N. J., a port further up the Delaware.

Chance or Design?
Whether chance or design brought about this singularly interesting shipping incident is not stated, but it certainly adds another link to the long chain of circumstances that bind our old city with America. In a leading article on the subject, the editor of the "Courier" states, "Residents of Bristol, Pa., U. S. A., will feel a bond of unity between that ship and themselves, because not only is the vessel named Bristol City, but the main offices of the owning corporation are located in Bristol, England, from which Bristol, Pa., got its name. . . . Who can tell but what some day, perhaps not in the far distant future, that very same vessel will be warped to a dock along this borough's shores." One wonders if the people of Bristol, Pa., will realize as they watch the passing of this first ocean-going steamship, how closely the old home port is bound up with their great country. On June 24, 1497, a Bristol ship, the Matthew, with a Bristol crew, discovered the mainland of North America a full year before Columbus, according to William Cullen Bryant and Sidney Howard Gay, in their history of the United States. In 1838, a Bristol ship, the Great Western, inaugurated the era of steam passenger service across the Atlantic, and the foundation of the great American navy is believed to rest on a Bristol barque, the Black Prince, which became a pirate, went ashore at Hispaniola, was recovered, and sold to the first government of the United States. These, of course, are but a few of the almost endless links that connect Bristol with America.

"Bristol, Pa."
Mr. H. V. Hindle passes on a copy of the "Bristol, Pa. Courier," containing a conspicuous notice of the mother town's enterprise in producing the film, "Bristol, the Birthplace of America," now being exhibited in the United States and in Canada. Apart from the reference to our own Bristol and the Development Board, this evening paper is exceedingly interesting. At the time of publication a "Girls' week" was in progress, the purpose, apparently, being to interest all and sundry, and especially the young men, in the matrons of today who are to be the matrons of the future. The week's programme included poetry, singing and music competitions, marble contests (whatever they might be), parades through the town, and as a concluding event a grand athletic meeting. Evidently public support for the girls did not reach high-water mark, for the editor, in a vigorous leading article, takes the matrons of Bristol, Pa., roundly to task for not giving up an afternoon of golf, an evening of bridge, or two hours at the movies "to help to mould characters, shape young lives, and teach girls to be good sports."

Silent synchro-mesh gears have stopped that stripping effect except in corn-on-the-cob season.

Warts, according to a medical publicist, are the result of acidosis, causing irritation and proliferation of the epithelial cells. But where do the hopoads come in?

CHAPTER FIFTY-FOUR
Robin moved toward him slowly, serious dark eyes, studying the grand-dad who didn't look like anyone he had ever seen before.
"He's got a good head," he father said, taking the little boy on his knee. "Gets that from your mother's side. I wouldn't say he had any of the Sargent in him, unless it's kind of around the mouth and chin."
"Does he—look so much like me?" she faltered. "Why nobody else—nobody ever? . . . Robin, darling, go out in the hall to Marie. She's waiting just outside the door. And come back in 15 minutes, to us? And then grand-dad and you and I will go home!"
"Goodbye, grand-dad—"
"Goodbye, sir!"
"I've always said he was adopted, you know," she continued, still a little unsteadily. "It seemed the best way."
"Yes, I know. I always figured you could do it your own way, Dolly. The rest of them seemed to think it was natural, your taking a boy to adopt. Bessie didn't act like it was anything out of the way. But I always thought . . . and of course, now I've seen him. Well, he's a nice boy. You'll raise him up all right. Oh . . . this is going to work out kind of bad now. I got young Sargent outside. He's waiting out by the stage door. I told him I'd—"
"You've got Ken Sargent—here—out by the—"
"Yes, out by the stage door. He didn't want to come in, but I told him sure, why not? I run into him as we were leaving. Right out on the sidewalk. He's changed a whole lot, Lily Lou. Kind of lost that way he used to have that grating on me. He seemed kind of blue, walking along by himself, so I spoke to him. I hope you don't mind—"
"Don't mind . . . oh, no . . . no. It doesn't matter. Is he—coming in? Here?"
"Unless he's got tired of waiting. I kind of forgot him. Guess I'd better go along. Maybe I'll come see you at the hotel tonight. That is, if you aren't busy—"
"Oh—no. I'm not busy. Do come—"
"Or if you change your mind, I'm staying over at the Travelers' Hotel on Mission street. I figured I'd stay over tonight."
"Yes—I'll call you. I'll—All right, dad—goodbye till then—I'll see you tonight!"
She went to the mirror, looked at herself anxiously. It was too late to change. She had better receive Ken this way, in makeup—with some of the thick of it wiped off. It didn't matter anyway. It was really quite funny . . . quite funny.
"Come in!" she said.
He stood in the doorway.
He was, as her father said, changed. She bit her lip. An old, nervous habit, forgotten years ago . . .
"It was nice of you to come," she said, looking at his broad shoulders, his tanned face, his whole alien being.
He took her hand. "It was nice of you to let me come. I would not have intruded, but your father—"
"Yes—he told me."
"I've been to every performance, of course, but I wouldn't have intruded—"
"No, of course not," she murmured, scarcely conscious of what she was saying. There seemed to be nothing left to say.
Here she was, and here he was, and five years, five, long hard years stood between them.

"You've changed," she said finally.
"So have you."
"I'm older. I've done what I started out to do."
"I always knew you would. I was never surprised when your name flared in the headlines, and I read about you in magazines and things. It was fate—"
"Fate! It was hard work! Oh, Ken, it's been hard. You don't know. I couldn't tell you. Besides . . . what does it matter. It's all over. Sit down—tell me about yourself."
"Not much to tell. It's you who—"
"Who made the front page? No—I saw your name in the papers often enough. I saved the clippings—"
"Nothing to my credit," he said.
"Oh! Some would think so. Just tell me. If you did read about me, didn't you think I might have liked to hear from you? A word of congratulation—a line—something? That was hard to take, Ken—"
She had not meant to say that. It slipped out.
"Hard to take! After you left me flat!"
"I'm flattered that you think I did. All these years I've had to live down the hurt of having been left—"
The look in his eyes stopped her. She was suddenly too tired, too spent after the performance, the emotion of meeting him, her father, everything, to go on.
"It doesn't matter." She walked over to the dressing room, dabbed at her brimming eyes. Remembered that she was still in make-up, and any minute Marie would be back with Robin . . . with Robin . . .
"You may as well know that I have a little boy—five years old." He stared at her.
"You mean that you, that you have—"
"Yes. You and I. I called him Robin."
He was silent for so long that she couldn't bear it. He shouldn't take it that way. What right had he to look at her as if she had robbed him, when it was all his fault, when he had left her alone, to work and fight—
"You had no right to keep that from me!"
"But you—but I—"
She was too tired. She couldn't tell him. "Ken, don't you see that I—that I couldn't—"
"Lily Lou—darling—"
He lifted her in his arms, rocked her as she used to rock the Bubby, crooning over her, whispering the foolish endearments of long ago. And she wept, and clung to him, and wanted to talk, to explain, to ask questions . . . but she was too tired . . . and anyway, what was the use, when they were together again?
"I waited for hours, sir," Marie told Tony. "I had Robin in bed, and the child was asleep, but they woke him up. I don't like to have him wake up. He's a high-strung child. He hadn't ought to be woke up like that, and get all excited. Madame Lansing hadn't ought to stay up all hours like that after a performance, either. She'll lose her voice, she will. She's frail. I don't like it."
Tony took his hat. "I won't wait to see her," he said. "Just give her my love and tell her she's magnificent in everything she does—even the foolish things. That is, if she asks for me. She may not think of it."

May and Bess were disgusted, simply disgusted to hear that Ken and Lily Lou were married again.
"My goodness, NOW! when she's got her career in her hands! She should have stayed with him in the first place if she wanted him. Oh, it just makes me SICK!" May said.
"Well, if she's happy . . . Bess said doubtfully.
"Yes, but it isn't even as if he had amounted to anything! Raymond got the low down on the whole thing. Didn't I tell you that Ken broke, with his father right after Lily Lou left for the east the first time, and acted perfectly disgracefully down there in South America? Raymond says he boasted about going down there to drink himself to death . . . yes, I know he doesn't drink now, I'm just telling you what this fellow told Raymond."
"But Lily Lou said he'd made a big success with his coffee plantations. She said distinctly that he did all that by himself, without any help from his father and that was why she was so proud of him!"
"Oh, fudge!" May said. "Is there any class in a coffee plantation? Shipping coffee? If he wanted to do shipping why didn't he stay with his father, and have all that capital in back of him? Here he is nothing but a shipper when all the time he could have been in his father's office!"
Bessie worked on the sock she was darning. "Well, it's taught me something. I'm going to let my kids live their own lives. Here we broke our necks to make an opera singer out of Lily Lou and all she wanted was that Ken Sargent."
"And Ken's father broke his neck to keep them apart and take Ken in the business, and after five years they're together again and Ken's still not in his father's business!"
The newspapers had the most to say.
There was a large picture of Lily Lou and Ken, as they were sailing for South America, right after the wedding.
Lily Lou was the proverbial opera star, wrapped in chinchilla, with orchids, large as any Nita Nahman ever wore on her shoulder, smiling brilliantly.
Ken, wearing a polo coat that wasn't very different from the one he wore in the old commuting days, stood in the background, holding small Robin, a youthful sailor in blue reefer and cap, by the hand.
The newspaper caption read: "Madame Lily Lou Lansing, with her husband, Kentfield Carey Sargent, on board the steamer Guadalupe—With them is Robin Lansing, Madame Lansing's child by a former marriage."
Tony was much amused when he saw the picture and the caption.
He and his friend, the chorus master, celebrated Lily Lou's wedding, in a little Italian restaurant, and waxed sentimental before the evening was over.
"Fame," said the chorus master, "fame in her fingers! And now she will never sing again! What a misfortune."
Tony wrapped several yards of spaghetti loosely around his fork. When most of it had disappeared down his gaping throat, he looked at his friend with wise, dark eyes and shook his head.
"Fame? Poof!" he said. "It is nothing. Does it matter if you are famous, when you are happy?"

What Lausanne Accord Means to Uncle Sam

Every Man, Woman and Child in United States May Be Saddled With $76.50 Debt as Result of European Reparations Agreement.

While European financial experts and statesmen are breaking out in eruptions of encomium over the harmonious conclusion of the Lausanne Reparations Conference, whereat the original reparations debt of $63,822,000,000 stipulated in 1920 to be paid by Germany to the Allies was finally whittled down to a mere $714,000,000, the layman in these United States is asking himself in a bewildered fashion "what does it mean to us?" The answer is approximately nine billion dollars. Though the U. S. did not take any part in the conference, the Allies have taken the stand that they cannot pay war debt installments due this country without corresponding reparations payments. And as they have agreed to cut the reparations to the states sum it mean that a corresponding cut will probably be passed on to the United States in the war debt matter. Of the eleven billion dollars due the U. S. by the Allies, only about a billion and a half has been paid, so if the Lausanne agreement is approved by the U. S. the remaining nine and a half billions may now be regarded as virtually uncollectable. This, on the basis of 1930 census figures (122,775,046 population) would plaster a debt of $76.50 on every man, woman and child in the U. S. Above is a diagram showing how the original German reparations debt has been shaved down by "easy" stages until it has finally shrunk to 99 per cent less than the originally stipulated amount. At top are the statesmen who participated in the Lausanne Conference. Left to right they are: Baron von Neurath, German Minister of Foreign Affairs; Signor Mosconi of Italy; Chancellor von Papen of Germany; Premier Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain, and Premier Eduard Herriot of France.

NECKLACES MADE OF FEATHERS BECOMING STYLISH IN PARIS

By Alice Langelier (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS.—Feathers make the most fashionable furbelow being worn around pretty Parisian throats these days. A necklace of shimmering cock feathers started the fad and now those of every bird that ever sang a note are going to make this seasonable "jewelry."

This has given impetus to the feather boa fashion which one well-known courturier has been trying to launch for some time. Boas of the cock feather are being worn for day and evening functions. The newest kind is very long and full, with the feathers tinted a beautiful steel-blue which is most becoming.

Ostrich boas are also being dragged out of the cedar-chest. Two of them are usually worn, joined at the ends.

More curious still is the new postage-stamp necklace which has been seen with a few sports costumes. Only the very rare ones are used, and of beautiful colors, encased in gold or silver and arranged on a little chain.

It may be that women are growing superstitious again. Returning to the fancies of a few years back, nearly every woman is wearing little charms attached to their bracelets or handbags. One recently seen at the Ritz at tea-time had a little silver elephant, trunk upturned for good luck, of course, hanging from a chain around her neck.

Another had four charms on her bag, an elephant, a swastika, a coin and an Egyptian figure.

SEVENTH INNING RALLY WINS FOR CRESCENTS

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE

Result of Last Night
CRESCENTS, 7; INDEPENDENTS, 6

(By T. M. Juno)

A two run rally in the seventh inning by the Crescents defeated the Independents, 7-6 last night on St. Ann's field. It was the first victory of the second half for the winners.

Going into the last frame, the "Indies" sported a 6-5 lead. Manager Vandegrift batted for Vandine and delivered a single to center. He tried to steal second and was nailed, Calla to Tulio. Britton walked. Ashby doubled to left center. Britton stopping at third. Flynn fanned. M. Cochrane hit a short single to center and Britton counted but Ashby held on to third. Beaton then hit the winning run in with a sharp single to center.

Turner Ashby who relieved "Art" Brooks in the third canto, received credit for the victory. He twirled the last four innings and allowed only four hits. He whiffed nine Independents. Brooks retired in the third when the goings became too rough.

For the first three innings, "Joe" Antonelli had the Crescent batters eating out of his hands. But the last half of the game saw his downfall when he was found for all of the Crescents' tallies and nine of their hits. In the first three innings, the Crescents solved his slants for only one hit.

"Bert" Avella, with a double and triple in three tries at the plate was the leading hitter of the night for the losers. "Morrie" Cochrane led the winners with two hits in two trips to the plate. He walked and was hit on his other two visits to the platter.

BENSALEM TOWNSHIP

The date of the Bensalem M. E. Church picnic has been set for July 23rd at Woodlawn Park in Trenton. Mrs. John Mortimer, who is confined in the Mercer Hospital under special care, is improving.

Bensalem Aces journeyed to Oakford Thursday evening, the Bensalem nine winning the six innings by score of 11 to 8. Darkness caused the tilt to be halted before the seventh was reached. Only one Bensalem hitter failed to get a hit during the game, and this aggregation scored three runs in the last inning.

COMMUNICATION

Editor, Courier, Bristol, Pa., U. S. A.

My dear Sir:

Would you be good enough to post us a copy of your issue containing any reference to the opening of the deep water channel and the passing of the Ideal Soul Winner", (Acts 8: 26 to 40; "Bristol City." Notes I have written on the subject taken from copies of the Courier have created great interest here. Our Lord Mayor and citizens generally are delighted to know that the "Bristol City" steamer of our port will be the first to carry the new overseas message of trade and commerce up the Delaware.

Now for the Trials

By HARDIN BURNLEY

FINAL OLYMPIC TRIALS

--TAKE PLACE THIS WEEK-END.

LOOKS LIKE THIS WILL BE THE GREATEST U.S. TEAM EVER!!

HEAD OLYMPIC COACH LAWSON ROBERTSON WILL BE SIZING UP ALL THE PROSPECTIVE OLYMPIC STARS!

SEXTON, BRIX AND THE OTHER BIG MUSCLE BOYS WILL BE HEAVING THE SHOT FOR A PLACE ON THE TEAM!!

--A MOB OF SPRINT STARS WILL BE TRYING TO QUALIFY!

AT last they are here. The final Olympic trials. The crucial test in which the cream of the nation's amateur athletes will step out and determine just who is going to be who in the Olympic games.

These tryouts will bring to a close about nine months of the most hectic competition ever seen in track and field events. Marks which before this pre-Olympic campaign had stood on the books for years, fell not once but several times before the terrific onslaught of fleet, strong and vigorous young Americans.

The mile run has taken its licks. The mark in this event, held by Joe Ray and Paavo Nurmi (on the board tracks) seemed fairly intact until Gene Venke came along. Then the Pottstown schoolboy made him stand up and take notice. First he clipped the world indoor mark by a few fractions of a second by pounding the Madison Square Garden boards and breaking the tape in 4:12. The world cheered and registered amazement. Not so much because the mark had been broken, but because of the manner in which Venke coasted home. He was stronger, sports writers commented, in his last hundred yards, than he was in the first few laps.

A short few days later, while the details of Venke's victory were being spread over the world, this amazing, 23-year old schoolboy toed the mark again on the same track. Bang! He was off. He paced himself beautifully. He kept an even stride. Then, in the last quarter he broke into a sprint. By yards and still more yards he widened the distance between him and his closest competitors. And when the shouting died down it was clear that the pride of Pottstown, Pa., had broken all existing records for the mile, including even Paavo Nurmi's outdoor record. The time was 4:10.

Wyckoff, Simpson, Dyer, Tolaa, Toppino and the rest of the sprinters held up their end, hovering around the fastest times ever accomplished. In unofficial trials, nearly all of them are reported to have lowered the marks in the sprints.

In the field events, perhaps the most formidable field ever to represent Uncle Sam is ready. Sexton, Brix—you could go through a list of names long enough to fill a page and still not exhaust the names of the athletes who are ready.

But only a few of them will survive the final trials this week-end. Their names no one can list—yet.

No Wonder Thatcher Colt Was Baffled!

THE MOST MYSTERIOUS WOMAN IN NEW YORK
HAD BEEN MURDERED UNDER HIS EYES!

Lola Carewe had become a tradition in the gay night life of New York. Dazzlingly beautiful, tantalizingly enigmatic, she appeared alone at all the night clubs, familiar to everyone, yet known by no one in the dizzy whirl of Gotham gaiety.

Then, almost under the eyes of Thatcher Colt, brilliant super-detective, she was murdered! Mystery piled on mystery! The baffling case reaches a peak of interest that will hold you to the very end of this enthralling new serial—!
